The vote for ratification stood 73 to 5.

The chief feature of the debate, all of which, of course, was in executive session, was the harsh criticism passed upon President Roosevelt by the Democratic Senators. Messrs. Morgan and Gorman were paricularly plain spoken, Mr. Gorman applying such words as "youthfulness" and "rashness" to the President for his work in making the treaty, and Mr. Morgan alluding to the President as posing as "the Great I Am ' The debate during the day was under the fifteen-minute rule, except the last two hours, which was equally divided between Mr. Morgan and Mr. Cullom, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, having charge of the treaty. Mr. Morgan spoke his entire time, but Mr Cullom concluded in forty minutes.

The fifteen-minute debate ended at 5:10, when Mr. Morgan began his hour's speech This was by no means, however, his only talk. He spoke several times during the day and was particularly bitter in discussing the so-called Money amendment was proposed as a substitute for Article 4 of the treaty containing the declaration that the United States has no sinister intentions touching the Southern republics.

That is a declaration of our friendliness toward the Central and South American republics," remarked Mr. Morgan. wrought into the highest law of the land, which the President will arrogate to himself with the announcement, 'I did it. I am the Four amendments were offered by Mr. Morgan before the prolonged debate on the Money amendment. The first provided for perpetual control of the canal zone instead of a lease for 100 years. This was rejected, as were all other amendments during the day except the Money amendment, by a viva voce vote. Mr. Morgan then offered an amendment inserting the then offered an amendment inserting the word "fortify" in the list of powers granted by Colombia to the United States in Article 2. This was passed over for a time, but was later rejected. Two other minor amendments were rejected, and the discussion of the Money amendment followed.

Messrs. Money, Daniel, Morgan, Gorman, Balley and Carmack were the only Democrats to speak on this, and they were answered by Messrs. Platt of Connecticut, Allison, Hoar, Spooner and Clark of Wyoming. Mr. Money's speech was an elaborate argument urging the extension of the meaning of Article 4 to include Mexico in the list of sister republics against which the United States is declared to have no ulterior motives either as to aggression against United States is declared to have no ulterior motives either as to aggression against territory or non-recognition of sovereignty. Mr. Daniel made the longest speech of the afternoon, three amendments being offered by Mr. Morgan at fifteen-minute inservals in order to permit Mr. Daniel to continue his speech under the rule. Mr. Daniel joined in the Democratic attack upon President Roosevelt, but was far more guarded in his criticism and more courteous in its expression than either Messrs. Morgan or Gorman.

Mr. Daniel's speech covered almost every phase of the treaty. He declared that the United States was frittering away every phase of the treaty. He declared that the United States was frittering away its rights in favor of Great Britain, Colombia and other countries. The provisions of Article 13, relating to joint judicial tribunals in the canal zone were especially distasteful to him.

Mr. Allison held with great vigor that the treaty was carefully prepared and needed up amendment to secure for the United States all the rights desired by the results for the construction of the canal.

needed mb amendment to secure for the United States all the rights desired by the people for the construction of the canal. One of the amendments offered by Mr. One of the amendments offered by Mr. Morgan during Mr. Daniel's speech provided that before the treaty should become operative the approval of Congress should be given. This was favored by Mr. Daniel's argument was that the treaty did not follow strictly the injunctions of the Spooner act, and that the consent of Congress must necessarily be given for make the divergent matter effective. Mr. Allison replied that in no essential particular was the treaty inconsistent with the Spooner act, but on the contrary it carried into effect the provisions of the Spooner act as contemplated by Congress.

Mr. Bailey spoke very briefly, advocating the adoption of the Money amendment and holding that the article proposed to be amended left Mexico to infer that this country might cherish evil designs toward her.

Mr. Platt of Connecticut made the lead-her.

Mr. Platt of Connecticut made the leading speech on the Republican side. He said that as a lawyer he was satisfied with the document and believed it would secure for the United States everything desired. He ridiculed the fears of the Democrats regarding Article 4, and expressed the belief that Mexico was too well assured of the friendship of the United States to go out of her way to inject something into this treaty that was not in it.

After remarks by Mesers. Teller, Carrusck. Spooner and others, the Money amendment was defeated by the only yea and nay vote taken on amendment during the day. The vote was 27 to 56.

Mr. Morgan offered an amendment providing for American courts in the canal sons, and eliminating or amending the fourth paragraph of Article 18, which provides for joint judicial tribunals. On this ministry Mr. Hoar spoke briefly, giving

KEENE HAS A SAY IN SO. PACIFIC

POOL CAN ELECT DIRECTORS BY POMPTON LAKES, N. J., March 17.-From CUMULATIVE VOTING. far and wide 'the farmers, ironworkers, dairymen, woodcutters and apple jack Majority of the Members of the Pool Have Consented to Its Continuance Until After the Annual Meeting-Street Watches the Fight With Interest.

Through a statement given out yesterday by the law firm of Hoadly, Lauterbach Johnson, counsel of Talbot J. Taylor & Co., brokers of James R. Keene, Wall Street learned for the first time that the big pool in Southern Pacific stock, of which Mr Keene is manager, is sure to be able to get some representation on the board of directors of the Southern Pacific company at the coming annual election because the laws of the State of Kentucky permit cumulative voting of stock, so that minority miles from Midvale and is nearer to Mr. Prince's estate. Several days ago he told his friends in the township that interests may secure representation. That this is so was confirmed by a representative of the Union Pacific Railroad interests, which now control and manage the Southern Pacific company.

The statement of Hoadly, Lauterbach & Johnson denies Wall Street reports that he holding of the election could be prevented by the Union Pacific interests failing, in case they were enjoined from voting the $90,000,000 of Southern Pacific stock eld by the Union Pacific Railroad, to attend the meeting with the other proxies that they might have collected, so that only a minority of the total stock would be present. Here is what Hoadly, Lauterbach & Johnson say:

At common law such of the shareholders as actually assemble at a properly convened neeting constitute a quorum for the transac-ion of business, and a majority of that quorum tion of business, and a majority of that quorum have authority to represent the corporation.

The fifth section of the charter of the Southern Pacific Company is a re-enunciation of the common law, and nothing more. Its practical effect is that for the purpose of ransacting business the votes of a majority of those present in person or by proxy at any meeting of the stockholders shall be cast, but the construction of this section of the statute is entirely immaterial, since the election of the directors of a corporation is a meeting of the stockholders shall be cast, but the construction of this section of the statute is entirely immaterial, since the election of the directors of a corporation is a matter entirely apart from the stockholders meetings contemplated by this section, which refers to business to be transacted and not to the election of directors.

For the purpose of such an election the presence of duly constituted inspectors to receive the votes of such of the shareholders as choose to avail of their right to vote is all that is necessary. No meeting whatever need be convened.

In the State of Kentucky, as in all other states where minority representation is provided for, as it is in that State, neither the presence nor the absence of a majority of the stock issued can affect the right of the minority stockholder to vote cumulatively if he so desires, in order to secure a representation of the minority.

Any other construction would absolutely defeat the law providing for minority representation by the right of exercise of cumulative voting which prevails in Kentucky.

It was officially announced yesterday that

It was officially announced yesterday that a majority of the members of the Keene pool have given their consent to an extension of time for the existence of the pool to April 10 and that the pool had therefore been extended to that time. This carries the period of its existence over April 8, the date for the annual meeting of the Southern Pacific Company. Wall Street continues to be greatly interested in the varying phases of the contest between the Keene pool and the Union Pacific interests.

Lines in the fight yesterday appeared to be as tightly drawn as at any time since the contest began. Both sides were understood to be gathering in proxies for use at the meeting from whatever source they can obtain them.

A representative of the Union Pacific interests criticised the official announcement that the Keene pool was to continue in existence to April 10 on the ground that to enable such a continuance every member of the pool must have consented to the extension of time something which he was of the pool must have consented to the ex-tension of time, something which he was sure was not so. All that could have been arranged, he explained, was the continuance of a majority of the pool until April 10. That a majority would agree to the proposed continuance was a certainty, for Mr. Keene and the Taylor firm, he said, together represented fully 40 percent, of the entire pool. The pool has been aggregating 280 000 shares cent, of the entire pool. The pool has been reported as aggregating 280,000 shares and that would make the Keene-Taylor interests 112,000 shares.

On the New York Stock Exchange yesterday Southern Paoific stock showed firmness all day, at one time touching 63% and closing at 63% or % of a point above Monday's close. The course of the stock was watched narrowip by the Wall Street traders. All sorts of stories have been circulating in Wall Street as to the probable outcome of the present situation. They have ranged from predictions of corners and panies to allegations that the whole contest was merely a bluff gotten up for effect on the general stock market.

Special Cable Despatches to THE SUN. ROME. March 17 .- The correspondent of THE SUN is reliably informed that the Superior of the Trappists has announced to the Pope that André Giron, the tutor who eloped with the former Crown Princess of Saxony, has entered the Trappist community.

DRESDEN, March 17 .- The King of Saxony has addressed an open letter to his people, in which he expresses his wish to thank them with his whole heart before his departure for the south for the proofs they have given of sympathy with him on the sad misfortune which has befallen himself and his family. He expresses the hope that the perturbation and excitement which have seized a large section of the population will now give place to quietude and the old feeling of confidence. Finally, the King begs the people not to believe those who represent that behind all the miserable business lies a tissue of falsehood and deception, but to believe the word of the King that this infinitely painful affair arose solely out of the ungovernable passion of a woman who had long before secretly fallen.

Emperor William visited the King of Saxony this afternoon. The King, with Prince Johann Georg, awaited the arrival of the Kaiser at the railway station. When the train arrived the Kaiser and the King entered a carriage and drove to the royal palace together.

He has grown a trifle stouter, his cheeks were red and his eyes clear, and he was altogether a picture of perfect health and strength. Mr. Schwab was accompanied home by Schwab, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A.

were many people to meet Mr. Schwab. among them Dr. and Mrs. E. M. Ward, the latter a sister of Mrs. Schwab, and Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Dinkey, relatives of Mr. Schwab from Homestead, Pa. Some business friends of Mr. Schwab were also on hand and they gave him a rousing greeting. Mr. Schwab's hand was almost shaken off by these friends. He was the most hauled and mauled of all of the passengers on the big Kronprinz.

But of all the greetings that Mr. Schwab got on his return home yesterday, the most gratifying came as the Kronprinz, steaming up to her pier shortly before 6 o'clock was off the foot of Rector street. From her decks Mr. and Mrs. Schwab could see the windows of the offices of the United States Steel Corporation, on the twelfth floor of the Empire Building at Broadway and Rector street. These windows were crowded with the clerks and other employees of the offices, who were waving hats and umbrellas in the direction of the big steamer which was bringing the president of the company home.

Mr. and Mrs. Schwab waved back vigorously, but, of course, were hardly seen from

It was some time after Mr. Schwab landed before the welcome of his iriends subsided enough to give him a chance to talk. Asked about business matters he declared that he had nothing to say about them now. Regarding the oft-repeated rumor that he is soon to resign the presidency of the United States Steel Corporation, he declared that he really knew nothing about such things and couldn't consent to talk about them.

"I have had simply a delightful time, said Mr. Schwab, 'and got what I went after, which was a time of perfect rest. My health demanded that I should nave rest when I went away last August, and I think that I can say that I am very much

"I don't know anything about such things," said Mr. Schwab, with a laugh; "ask some of my friends here [pointing to the men who had met him]. They know all about it, I guess. I do not desire to talk about steel or about business now. I have been away for some time and I am in no position to talk of business matters. About my travels I am only too willing to talk, for they were very enjoyable.

"I have been at Cannes, Ajaccio, Tunis, Cagisari and all the other places of interest along the coast. In most of these places I just looked around and remembered all the time that I was going about for rest. I bought no works of art abroad, save a Rubens and the two statues which I ordered from Jean Leon Gérôme, representing Tabor' and "Metallurgical Seience." Mr. Schwab was asked about the reports from abroad that at one time he was seriously ill there, and that he had raced around Lake Geneva in a launch.

SAYS PENNELL DID IT.

Burdick's Partner, Parke, Accuses Dead Lawyer.

PENNELL'S MOTIVE STRONGEST.

Parke's Testimony Very Favorable to Mrs. Hull-He Accounts for the Actions of the Family on the Morning After the Murder on the Ground of Shock and Grief -Mrs. Paine Says Burdick Told Her and He Was Willing to Forgive Pennell If the Lawyer Would Marry Mrs. Burdick-Burdick's Friends Had Warned Him Against Pennell, but Burdick Belleved Him to Be a Physical Coward.

BUFFALO, March 17.-For the first time since the beginning of the Burdick inquest witness has named a person whom he believes to be the murderer of the envelope manufacturer. Charles S. Parke, for almost twenty years the business partner and close friend of Mr. Burdick, swore on the stand to-day that he was satisfied as to who the criminal was.

"Well, who was it?" asked the District "Arthur Pennell, in perion or by hired ssassin, said Parke. Mr. Coatsworth pursued a line of questioning to get at the basis for Parke's opinion. The witness, who seemed morally certain in his suspicion, could give as his only reason the fact that he considered Pennell's motive to be the strongest. Parke's announcement came quietly, in the natural course of the proceedings, and toward the close of the session.

He had been questioned exhaustively and had repeated the story of Burdick's domestic troubles as Burdick had told them to him in their office weeks ago. Burdick had said that he did not blame Mrs. Burdick. but did blame Pennell. Burdick said he had been warned by friends to look out for Pennell, but had paid little heed, as he thought Pennell was a physical coward. Burdick told Parke that Pennell and Mrs.

Pennell had asked him to take Mrs. Burdick back, and that he refused. Parke told of the happenings at the Burdick house when he arrived there after the murder. He swore that Dr. Marcy, who met him at the door, told him

Whether the authorities are prepared to accept a belief such as Parke's is not clear. A significant question was asked of him by Justice Murphy after the ac-"If no one in the house was in collusion with the murderer, do you not think it strange they should not aid the police in every way possible?" The presiding officer's question related in part to the course of the Burdick family on the morning of the murder when the authorities tried to question them. Mr of the children at the request and instiga tion of Dr. Marcy, and Dr. Marcy had already objected to the questioning of Mrs. Hull, Burdick's mother-in-law. Mr. Parke admitted to-day that he had Marcy's wishes, but gave as an excuse that he had regarded Dr. Marcy as being in charge of the house.

When asked how Pennell could have en tered the house he suggested the rear window that was found open and added that it might have been easy for Pennel

Next to Parke the foremost witness of the day was Mrs. Gertrude Barnard Paine, who had plenty to say about her meetings and talks with Burdick and about the B dick and Pennell scanda's. She gave her alibs on the night of the murder, told of her test telephone talk with Burdick on the day before the murder and touched lightly
